

The Suggestion Box, Inc. Announces a Free, New Service Aimed at Allowing News Casters and Reporters to Receive Anonymous Tips From the Public Without Fear of Retribution or Being Identified

Thursday September 27, 8:30 am ET

The Anonymous Tips Can Be Sent by Email or by the Company's Patent Pending Anonymous Text Messaging, Which Allows the Reporter to Correspond With the Sender

SCOTTSDALE, AZ--(MARKET WIRE)--Sep 27, 2007 -- The Suggestion Box, Inc. (Other OTC:SGTB.PK - News), dba www.TheAnonymousEmail.com, announced today that they have set up a new service on their website allowing citizens to send "anonymous tips" to newspaper or radio/TV reporters anywhere in the world. The free service utilizes The Suggestion Box's anonymous email capability and its patent pending text messaging technology. The text messaging allows the recipient to respond back to the sender and the sender still stays anonymous.

The benefit to the reporters is the ability to access information that they may not have been privy to before, and to allow concerned citizens to report information without the fear of retribution or being identified. Reporters can simply go to our website and sign up for the service. There is no charge and it doesn't take more than a few minutes. The company is suggesting that reporters mention at the end of their stories or columns that their readers can go to www.TheAnonymousEmail.com website and send them any information they may have regarding a story or case.

Citizens can access the service by logging on to www.TheAnonymousEmail.com, and, under the section entitled NEWSPAPERS, they would click on "send email." This would take them to the registered newspaper's or reporter's page and would allow them to send an email with the template provided. The recipient's email address does not show up on the template.

The company stated: "There are various types of 'silent witness' and so-called 'hot lines' that keep the caller anonymous, but telephone callers can be identified by voice recognition and emails can be identified by tracing the IP number that the email came in from. When a person logs on to our system, they automatically go into our servers, leaving their identifying number behind, and the outgoing Email is sent through www.TheAnonymousEmail.com servers using our IP number. Citizens could also alert reporters by using our patent pending anonymous text messaging system."
