

The Anonymous Email Enters UK Market, Giving UK Citizens the Option of Sending Completely Untraceable Emails

<http://www.TheAnonymousEmail.uk.com> is a free service that allows subscribers to send completely anonymous emails to anywhere in the world. These emails are sent through the company's servers, and therefore cannot be traced back to the sender.

Scottsdale, AZ (PRWeb UK) September 16, 2009 -- TheAnonymousEmail.com is launching an ad campaign targeting citizens in the UK and other EU nations that have mandated the archival of all Internet traffic throughout the European Union. The anonymous system is used by commercial customers for employees to report wrongdoing, by schools for children to report bullying or drug dealing, and by individuals just to get something off their minds.

The Anonymous Email, (TAE), considered the foremost anonymous email service in the world, has protected its subscribers for years by never giving up the names or records of any of its users. For more information regarding the protection of our subscribers, go to the company's web site and view the previous announcements.

The way the system works is that once a subscriber signs on to the TAE web site, they are logged on to the company's server. Anyone tracing an email will get to this server, but not to the email sender's computer, so they cannot tell who originated the email. The anonymous system is used by commercial customers for employees to report wrongdoing, by schools for children to report bullying or drug dealing, and by individuals just to get something off their minds.

Howard R. Baer, Editor, stated: "The ruling by the EU to archive all internet correspondence is simply going to lead to further intrusions by all governments on its citizens. Our goal is to offer some sense of privacy in the personal lives of citizens anywhere in the world, and we are doing exactly that. Our service is free to anyone that wants to subscribe and to keep their personal business "personal."

Subscribers can log on to the web site at www.TheAnonymousEmail.uk.com or www.TheAnonymousEmail.co.uk for a free subscription.
